

✈️ What Days Are Delta Tickets Cheapest?

If you're planning a trip and want to save money, knowing which days Delta tickets are cheapest can make a big difference. Airline prices change constantly, but there are patterns you can use to your advantage. With a bit of flexibility and smart timing, you can easily find lower fares on Delta Airlines without much effort.

Let's break down the best days to book and fly, why those days are cheaper, and extra tips to help you stretch your travel budget.

💡 The Short Answer

Generally, the cheapest days to fly on Delta Airlines are Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday.

These days typically have the lowest fares because they fall outside of peak travel times. Most travelers prefer to fly on Fridays, Sundays, or Mondays, so Delta often lowers prices midweek and on Saturdays to fill seats.

📅 Why These Days Are Cheaper

Airlines, including Delta, adjust prices based on demand — and demand tends to dip during certain parts of the week. Here's why:

1. Midweek travel is less popular.

Business travelers usually fly Monday through Thursday, while vacation travelers prefer weekends. That leaves Tuesday and Wednesday flights less crowded, prompting Delta to lower fares to attract passengers.

2. Saturday flights fill fewer business seats.

Business travelers rarely fly on Saturdays, and leisure travelers often start or end their trips on Fridays or Sundays. That makes Saturday a “hidden gem” for cheaper flights.

3. Fare adjustments early in the week.

Many airlines, including Delta, update or match fares early in the week (often Monday night into Tuesday), which can lead to fresh deals appearing midweek.

📅 When to Book for the Best Price

While knowing which days to fly is important, the day you book your ticket also matters. Most experts suggest:

- Book your Delta flight on a Tuesday or Wednesday when new deals are released.
- Avoid booking on weekends when prices tend to climb due to increased browsing and demand.

For domestic flights, the best window is usually 1–3 months before departure, and for international routes, aim for 2–6 months in advance.

Best Time of Day to Book or Search

Believe it or not, even the time of day can affect what fares you see.

Searching for Delta flights early in the morning or late at night can sometimes reveal better prices, as fewer people are online booking during those hours.

Fare systems also refresh overnight, so early searches might show newly discounted seats before they sell out.

How to Use Flexible Dates to Save More

One of the easiest tricks to finding cheaper Delta tickets is to use flexible date searches.

When you're flexible by just a day or two, you can often save a lot. For example:

- Flying out on a Tuesday instead of Monday could save you $50 or more.
- Returning on a Wednesday instead of Sunday can sometimes cut your fare in half.

If your schedule allows, try adjusting both your departure and return days to find the combination that gives you the lowest total price.

Avoiding Peak Travel Seasons

Even if you fly on the right day of the week, prices can still rise during high-demand travel seasons, such as:

- Summer vacation (June to August)
- Major holidays (Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's)
- Spring break

To get the best value, plan trips during shoulder seasons — early spring or fall — when demand is lower and Delta often runs fare promotions.

Choosing Cheaper Fare Types

Another way to make your Delta flight cheaper is by selecting Basic Economy or other discounted fare types.

Basic Economy fares offer the lowest prices but come with restrictions, such as no seat selection or ticket changes. If you're comfortable traveling light and have flexible plans, this can be an excellent way to save money.

Don't Forget Fare Sales and Promotions

Delta Airlines often runs limited-time sales during the year, sometimes offering big discounts on select routes.

These sales often appear early in the week, aligning with the lower-priced travel days of Tuesday and Wednesday.

To take advantage of them, check prices frequently or set alerts to monitor fare changes.

Use Miles and Rewards to Lower Costs

If you're a Delta SkyMiles member, you can redeem your miles to make flights even cheaper — especially when flying on those less expensive midweek days.

Delta occasionally runs “mileage flash sales,” which allow you to use fewer miles for specific routes. This can make Tuesday or Wednesday flights even more affordable if you're booking with miles instead of cash.

Example: How Prices Vary by Day

Let's look at a simple example for a round-trip flight from Atlanta to Los Angeles:

- Depart Friday, Return Sunday: $420
- Depart Tuesday, Return Wednesday: $285
- Depart Saturday, Return Tuesday: $310

As you can see, midweek and Saturday combinations tend to give you the best savings — often $100 or more per ticket.
