is enacted in a practical manner. OCC provides multicultural experiences in a variety of areas including academics, arts, and programs and opportunities with community groups and social service providers.

The college is strengthened by the diversity of its students, faculty and staff, including international students, students of color and GLBTQ+ students and employees. The diverse lived experiences in our college community help align planning, budgeting and decision-making across the College. A designated office coordinates campus activities and is helpful in curricular and co-curricular planning and embedding diversity into many campus activities and practices.

The ideas of social service conscientiousness are grounded in the basic operational documents of the College, including the strategic plan, its curriculum and co-curricular efforts, and employee policies and procedures. These documents provide a mission-centered framework to guide the work of the College. With the college’s former strategic plan expiring in 2022, Dr. Somerville led Owens in a process that included internal and external stakeholders in developing the new plan to ensure Owens maintains its position serving students and the region. The new Strategic Plan focuses on engagement, both internally and externally, and in creating organizational strength by fostering a culture of trust and community through shared leadership, recognizing individuals’ contributions and promoting life-long learning and development.

The College interacts with its stakeholder groups with dedicated Presidential involvement in the community, specifically with regional workforce interaction. This is illustrated by the 50 advisory committees and 800 people involved in providing the campus with input regarding how to meet the needs of the region it serves.

TOLEDO, FINDLAY AND NORTHWEST OHIO

Toledo is listed among the best U.S. cities to live and retire in, according to the U.S. News and World Report. The rankings are based on the quality of life, the job market, the value of living, and people's desire to live in each area. The report notes the city's slogan, "you will do better in Toledo," as representative of Toledo residents' positive attitude.

According to U.S. News and World Report, "though tourists might not flock to Toledo as they do to some nearby metropolitan areas, residents know what makes the area great, including a low cost of living and a wealth of outdoor activities." The rankings are based on housing affordability, happiness, desirability, retiree taxes, health care quality, and the job market.

Known as the "Glass City" for its roots in the glass-making industry, Toledo is just a short drive from other major Great Lakes metro areas like Detroit and Cleveland. But that doesn't mean residents are quick to get out of town. Toledo is home to an array of attractions, from museums to sports venues to kid-friendly activities, which keep those who live here entertained. Prominent attractions include the Toledo Museum of Art, Metroparks Toledo and the Toledo Zoo & Aquarium.

A mix of family-friendly activities and outdoor recreation draws people to this Ohio metro area. Downtown Toledo is bustling during the workweek and when events happen at places like the Huntington Center, which hosts concerts and sporting events throughout the year, and by its professional baseball, the well-known and beloved Toledo Mud Hens, and the Toledo Walleye hockey team. At other times, downtown can seem sparse. The exception to that is along the Maumee River, where people congregate to take in the views or spend time fishing, and the summer Farmers' Market.

Toledo is heavily integrated with its suburbs, like Sylvania, Perrysburg and Ottawa Hills, so it's quite common to take advantage of restaurants and activities in those areas. Cedar Point amusement park and Put-In-Bay, an island with myriad restaurants and activities, are big attractions that are close enough to make for an easy day trip.

The Findlay-area Campus is in one of Ohio's most progressive cities. Living in Findlay offers residents a dense suburban feel and most residents own their homes. In Findlay there are a lot of coffee shops and parks. Many families and young professionals live in Findlay and the area is a top micropolitan for economic development. The public schools in Findlay have math and reading scores that are consistently higher than the state average.
